Information for you

Looking for ways to protect your legacy? For many people, once they have secured their own financial security, leaving a legacy to family members is a paramount concern. With proper planning, legal fees and taxes may be reduced. Making a will, indicating beneficiaries, gifting cash and creating trusts can help. For more information, read the second-page article in the enclosed issue of Total Investment Planning.

1	What efforts have been made toward the prep	paration of a plan of reorganization?
	G-I's progress towards a plan in this case (and that of	the jointly-administered debtor, ACI Inc.) has had three distinct phases: litigation, mediation, and an apparent resolution.
		o confirming any chapter 11 plan in this case: (i) whether BMCA has any asbestos liability and (ii) the gainst G-I. As a result, the early years of this case were taken up in litigation intended to address and adversary proceeding through which G-I sought a declaratory judgment that BMCA has no successor estimation motions aimed at quantifying G-I's liability. The declaratory judgment litigation began essed in the District Court, which withdrew the reference in this action. The parties engaged in s proceeding. Separately, after a request to remove G-I's estimation motion was denied, the bankruptcy court rendered a decision on certain threshold legal i	issues. Consistent with this decision, the parties presented various protocols and G-I was preparing dom sample of approximately 2,500 asbestos claimants in connection with the aggregate estimation of G-I's asbestos liability.
	While these issues were presenting C.I. the Commit	ttee, and the Legal Representative participated in a mediation, following which the parties outlined the eir outstanding disputes in G-l's chapter 11 case and agreed to endeavor to complete the global settlement with comprehensive documentation in the	e form of a proposed chapter 11 plan and its ancillary documents. In order to avoid incurring additional
